LOGAN'S GARDEN SHOP RELOCATING TO FARMERS MARKET IN 2025

Returning to its roots

Raleigh, NC – Logan's Garden Shop, a beloved fixture in the gardening community, is thrilled to announce a return to its historic roots. Established in 1965 at the old Farmers Market, Logan's is making an exciting move to the garden center site at the NC State Farmers Market in 2025.

Having originated at the historic Farmers Market nearly six decades ago, Logan's Garden Shop holds deep roots in the local Raleigh community. The decision to return to the Farmers Market is not only a nod to its beginnings but will also allow Logan's to better align with its core values and commitment to serving garden enthusiasts across the region.

"We are incredibly excited to announce our relocation to the NC State Farmers Market in 2025. We plan to make investments in the facilities and site to improve the shopping experience for our guests and other visitors to the Farmers Market," said Joshua Logan, Owner & CEO at Logan's Garden Shop. "Returning to our roots is a significant milestone for us. It's a testament to our heritage and a reflection of our dedication to supporting North Carolina Agriculture and providing quality products and exceptional service to our customers."

The NC State Farmers Market offers an ideal setting for Logan's Garden Shop to thrive, providing a vibrant marketplace where locals can indulge their passion for plants while enjoying the bustling atmosphere and diverse array of local vendors. "Logan's can trace its roots back to the State Farmers Market's first location on Hodges Street, so we are excited to be welcoming them back home," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "They will be an excellent addition to the market, providing one-stop shopping for gardening needs, planters, yard tools, plus seasonal décor and more."

Farmers Market manager, Monica Wood, had this to say about the news "Logan's Garden Shop will be a wonderful addition to the market and we are looking forward to welcoming them back in 2025. They will bring a wealth of gardening knowledge along with many new and exciting opportunities for everyone who loves to garden, and we can't wait to see all they have to offer." Wood, who herself has been a part of the farmers market for many years, also remembered that "Joshua grew up at the old market location, and so it's like a homecoming for him and his family. Now that he has kids of his own they can also experience the State Farmers Market and all it has to offer."

"We believe the Farmers Market environment fosters a sense of community and camaraderie among gardening enthusiasts," added Joshua Logan. "It's the perfect fit for Logan's Garden Shop, and we can't wait to reconnect with our loyal customers and welcome new ones to our new location. With its location adjacent to the 306 acre Dix Park and its proximity to both Downtown Raleigh and Interstate 40, we believe that the future of the Farmers Market is a bright one, full of excitement and energy! Our family looks forward to continuing to serve as the Triangle's destination home and garden center for another 60 years!"

With the move to the NC State Farmers Market, Logan's Garden Shop aims to continue its tradition of excellence, offering a wide selection of plants, gardening supplies, home décor, and expert advice to help customers cultivate thriving gardens and green spaces.

The Logan's brand continues to grow throughout the Triangle area, recently expanding its operations to include 2 new locations:

Grasshopper Farms, a 15 acre strawberry farm, nursery, and agritourism destination in Eastern Wake County at 8004 Poole Rd. www.grasshopperfarmsnc.com

Logan's Garden Hut, a 6 acre garden center located at 1004 Old Honeycutt Rd in Fuquay-Varina. www.logansgardenhut.com

The Farmers Market is conveniently located just inside the beltline near the intersection of I-40 and Lake Wheeler Rd.
